

Preventing Injury and Illness at Work

Create a safer workplace with content that speaks to all types of employees, from in the office to on the job site.

A TRAINING SOLUTION DESIGNED TO DRIVE CHANGE

Today's workplaces come in a lot of varieties. From workers who are on the job encountering mechanical hazards, to desk employees who might work at home or in an office (or a bit of both!), a one-size-fits-all solution doesn't meet the needs of your employees.

With our Preventing Injury and Illness at Work course, you can pick from two learning paths to deploy the right content modules based on what an employee's typical day and workplace looks like. Leverage our Operational Staff or Office Staff course versions to ensure content is relevant for your learners. Informed by OSHA best practices and applicable to employees across the globe, this course delivers the knowledge and skills workers need to contribute to a safe environment.

TOPIC AREAS

Learners will walk away understanding the following concepts:

- Promoting a safe workplace, prevent injuries and illnesses, and reduce accidents by giving all employees the agency to think and to prepare
- Recognizing the various types of hazards they might encounter in the workplace
- Handling hazards, and how to prevent injury and illness
- Planning Emergency Action, including how to report safety concerns at work and how to respond and act in emergency situations

Did you know- Liberty Mutual's 2021 Workplace Safety Index found that employers spend $1 billion dollars a week in workers' compensation for non-fatal accidents?
